Lesson for January 9

THE STANDARD OF CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT—Luke 6:27-35. GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect. PRIMARY TOPIC—How Jesus Wants Us to Live. JUNIOR TOPIC—Marching Orders for Christians. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Christ Requires of Us. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christ's Life and Example for Us.

The context (v. 26) clearly implies that is elsewhere positively declared (John 15:18-21; Luke 21:17) that the followers of Christ will be hated and opposed. In this lesson Christ sets forth the principles governing the life of his followers.

I. "Love Your Enemies" (v. 27). Love here is not a natural affection. To love friends is easy, but to love enemies is only possible to those who have been made partakers of the divine nature—been born again.

II. "Do Good to Them Which Hate You" (v. 28).

Love is positive in its nature. The true Christian will not merely refrain from doing injury to one who hates him, but will be concerned with and engaged in doing good to him. True love acts according to its own essential nature.

III. "Bless Them That Curse You" (v. 29).

To bless means to speak well of—to invoke a blessing upon. Injury by words is hard to let go unchallenged. The one who is a child of God and allows the Spirit of his Maker and Redeemer to express itself through him will return blessings for cursings.

IV. "Pray for Them Which Despitefully Use You" (v. 30).

We should pray for those who abuse us. The best commentary on this precept is Christ's own example (Luke 23:34). "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." When Christ was reviled he reviled not again. When he suffered, he suffered not, but committed himself to Him that judgeth righteously. (I Pet. 2:23).

V. Patiently Endure Wrong and Injury" (v. 31).

The Christian is not to bristle in defense of his rights but rather to suffer insult, injury and even loss. This expresses the attitude which should govern the individual's actions, but should not be pressed so far that evil-doers can go unchecked. Rightly constituted government has been ordained of God for the protection of the innocent and the punishment of evildoers (Rom. 13:1-5).

VI. Give to Every One That Asks of Thee (v. 30).

God is the supreme example. He gives freely and generously but intelligently. This text does not authorize indiscriminate giving. There is a giving which injures the one to whom the gift is made. To give a man money to buy whisky would be wrong.

VII. Do as You Wish to Be Done By (v. 31).

This is called the Golden Rule. It is the sum total of Christian duty as it pertains to human relationships. Human beings carry with them the consciousness which is the touchstone which teaches them their duty to others. If men were to live up to this rule the problem of capital and labor would be solved and end would be put to war. International relations would be peacefully adjusted and all profiting in business would end. Practicing this precept proves that we are children of God. Loving those who love us, doing good to those who do good to us, leading to those who lead to us, is the common practice even among sinners. No new birth, no Holy Spirit needed to live this kind of life.

VIII. Be Merciful (v. 30).

This means to be filled with pity and compassion. To enter into sympathy with every need of others. The supreme example as to this is the Heavenly Father.

IX. Censorious Judgments Condemned (v. 26).

This means that we should not seek out the evil or faults in others for our satisfaction. We should not sit in censorious judgment upon the actions of others. However, it does not prohibit the just estimation of the character of others by their actions.

X. The Compensations of Right Living (v. 35).

The one who gives freely of money, loves sincerely, makes the Golden Rule the standard of his life, shows mercy and kindness to others, and refrains from imputing the motives of others will be fully rewarded in kind. God will see to it that there be no loss.

Keeping the Mouth Closed

If a man can keep his mouth closed it is a sure sign that he could say something if he opened it.—King's Business.

Fewer Words

The more you say, the less people will remember. The fewer the words, the greater the profit.—Fenelon.

Keep an Eye on the One

Keep your eye on the One gone up.—Echols.

Earth's Untold Wealth in Natural Humus

Explained by Our Assistant Editor, F. E. Mitchell, of Alton, N. H., Who Knows Whereof He Writes

Following publication of the Boston Transcript's article on the deposit of leaf-mold discovered at Kingston, New Hampshire, and the comments which it evoked, Mr. D. C. Clark of Winter Hill, Massachusetts, wrote for further particulars about the best known methods of handling this substance or soil. This was followed in turn by a letter from one who had known and utilized his knowledge of natural humus for many years. And his method, as stated, was one of the best and most efficient known. I refer to the letter of Mr. W. O. Perry of Norway.

This substance may be called mud and leaf-mold by those who prefer; but it is a mixture of decayed mineral matter and decayed vegetable matter, mostly the latter, and as this is exactly what the bog deposits are composed of, I shall hereafter refer to it as natural humus, meaning humus that has collected by natural processes and as yet unhandled by man.

In my experiences during the past ten years I have tried various methods, the one most productive of results being as follows:

During the late summer or early autumn, when the surplus water will have evaporated from the bog, haul a considerable quantity of humus to a point convenient to the stables. Haul as much as you can, for you can never have too much of it. If this is done in August, it will have time to dry out sufficiently before freezing weather. If you can place it under a roof, yet where it can have plenty of ventilation, so much the better.

Each day, if you keep horses or cattle feed in a quantity of this natural humus and spread it behind the animals so as to catch and absorb all of the fluids, the most valuable part of all animal manures and to mix with the manure as it is thrown out or carried away. This conserves the vital parts of the manure, introduces bacteria into the natural humus, and gives a product that is at least three times as valuable as manures handled in the ordinary way.

When this method is employed, the manure can be thrown in a pile in the open without the ordinary losses by evaporation and from leaching, and the bacteria will have opportunity to multiply and give "life" to the mixture. And the natural humus is used, the better, for one bushel of manure is sufficient for ten bushels of natural humus.

Use in Henhouses

Then use natural humus on the dropping boards in the poultry houses, cleaning off the boards each day. In this way the poultry manure and natural humus will be well mixed and the valuable parts of the manure retained practically complete. This mixture should be stored where it will be sheltered from rains until used, and if plenty of manure is used and the boards cleaned daily, you will have a mixture more valuable than can ordinarily be bought in bags.

Remember that the value of the humus is to be greater than its value. When handled as herein suggested, the value is far greater than that of the manure and then scratch gravel to pay for commercial fertilizers that are largely composed of sand is not economy. And when a ton in New Jersey can sell raw natural humus for seventy-five cents a bushel, the buyer to pay transportation, it must have value. It has value, as anyone can demonstrate if he will take the trouble.

Note—Any letters addressed to the Editor, Norway, Me., or to F. E. Mitchell, Alton, N. H., will be answered in due course of time.

Happy New Year!
New Boston Breezes

Considerable interest was manifested in the boxing exhibition, recently given at the Cuney Box Co. plant. The Box Co. has turned out a number of good boxes, but the recent bout, K. O. Perry vs. Hudson (super-six) Simmons was pronounced by all present to have been an eye-opener for all (except the contestants).

Hudson took the initiative, being equipped with a self starter, and using one arm for a windshield, tried to connect with Perry's hand lights. Perry's motto was "Don't give up the ship," although Simmons' onslaught nearly took the wind out of his sails, and sprang a leak in his job boom. The battle was merely pro-gressing up and down, back and forth, pro and con; spectators stood, spellbound, with bated breath, waiting for the decisive blow, which should end the encounter; both contestants were sparring warily for an opening. Simmons drew back his famous right, Perry was boxing cautiously—unexpectedly the blow came. The foreman appeared.

Why College Men Fail

Told by One Who Has Tried the Experiment

A large employer of help tried out the scheme of putting college educated men to work in a manufacturing concern. It was not a success. He now says:

"No college graduate need apply to me for a job. He will not even get consideration. I have had my fill of college graduates, and have made an absolute rule against hiring college men."

This pronouncement against college-trained men comes from a prominent eastern business executive who formerly favored college graduates. It comes also at a time when American colleges are graduating the largest number of young men in their history. He bases his reason for his conclusion as follows:

1.—Because of their naive notions about business—or their prejudices against the business world.

2.—Because of their laziness, irregular hours, desires for much time off, and their casual attitude toward their work.

3.—Because of their constant desire for undeserved raises in salary in order to maintain the false standard of life they learn of in college when they lived on their father's money or bluffed their way, or went into debt.

4.—Because of their ingrained notion that they are of a different breed and therefore should be treated differently from the non-college workers.

5.—Because of their lack of ability to think, to make reasoned and practical deductions.

6.—Because of their pleasure-loving habits, fostered at college, which seriously interfere with their tackling a job in an earnest manner.

7.—Because of their unwillingness to start work at a salary that they are worth.

8.—Because of their tendency to leave as soon as a little more money is offered them; in other words because of no sense of apprenticeship and of growth by degrees of merit.

They "can't" forget their college or college life, and they are not of the world of their diploma. The showing of the graduates contrasts very poorly with that of non-graduates. I know. I've been watching them for years.

A fifty years' survey leads us to believe he has come to the right conclusion. Of the six boys we have assisted through the financial struggle of college, we feel would have been better fitted to have served an apprenticeship than to have taken a college course.

DEAFENED CHILDREN RECEIVING INCREASED ATTENTION

To discover best methods of detecting defective hearing in children in public schools of the United States and to determine how this handicap may be overcome in School Instruction, the American Federation of Organizations for the Hard of Hearing, at the suggestion of the United States Health Bureau, United States Department of the Interior, appointed a committee to conduct a study in public schools of the country. Preliminary surveys made by this committee indicate that the hearing of about 3,000,000 school children is defective. In many cities special classes have been conducted for some time for seriously hard-of-hearing children. The preliminary studies especially to children whose hearing is not so seriously affected as to require segregation in the special schools.

After the regular meeting, a social hour was spent in playing games and doing stunts. Refreshments were served, of candy, popcorn and apples. The object of this club is to create more interest in the Sunday school and better attendance. If a member is absent from Sunday school two Sundays in succession, without a good excuse, their name will be taken from the club record and they will not be considered a member. They have nine members at present, none under ten years old can join, or over twenty.
